

Batram Wood is owned by the Royal Forestry Society and was planted with 80,000 trees between 1998 and 2001. Grange Wood (planted in 2000 with 100,000 trees), Park Farm Wood (2002), and Pretoria Road Woods (2003/4) are all privately owned and consist mainly of broadleaved species. Workman's Wood (1999/2000) is mostly fast growing commercial poplars.

B At the brow of the hill you can see the roofs of Ibstock behind and those of Batram ahead. At this point go right, keeping the hedge to the left, to another track (the Nailstone miners went straight on here to the Nailstone Wood and thence to the colliery 1865 to 1967).

Turn left and follow the track to Batram.

At the gate to Batram Road, there is an optional loop to view the Nailstone colliery and spoil heap of Batram colliery, which is now a nature reserve.

C On reaching the gate to Batram Road, double back down a footpath to the left, passing an information board on the way downhill. At the path junction with another information board and bench, bear right downhill.

D Cross the stream and continue straight ahead to meet a path crossing. (note: The Workman's Wood ahead is open to explore and enjoy). Turn right, keeping the hedge to your right and then, when the path bends left, cross to have the hedge on the left. Continue towards Pickering Grange, a listed farmhouse (circa 1200).

Follow the path through a field to reach a tarmac road. Stay on this road to get to the main road, then left. To the right of the Hepworth Building Products is the former Ellistown colliery site 1874 - 1989.

E After passing by the next footpath on the left, take the track on the left. Follow this track back to Ibstock. As you walk along, to the right you will have views of Ellistown where South Leicester colliery was situated 1876-1986, and Hugglescote, Ravenstone and Coalville.

You can also see the spoil heap of Stribston colliery 1832-1983, now Stribston Discovery Park, one of the jewels to emerge from the dust of the mine closures.

As you breast the rise of the hill stop to observe the view over the roof tops of Ibstock. From left to right you can see into Warwickshire and Staffordshire.

Carry on down the hill to re-enter Ibstock, going past another marker stone by the site of the former Ibstock colliery, closed 1927. Continue in the same direction to reach the village centre and starting point.

Linking into the footpaths and byways nearby can shorten the walk.

Other walks nearby: Normanton le Heath, Sweptstone, Appleby Magna and Carlton. The National Forest also has a number of walks in the area.

The routes are clearly marked with bold, yellow topped waymarker posts and waymarker discs with the Parish Walks symbol.
